

Communication Curriculum for Individuals on the Autism Spectrum

*Updated by Amy Moore Gaffney, M.A., CCC-SLP
January 2020*

Individuals on the autism spectrum characteristically have delays in communication and language development. Speech and language delays affect socialization, behavior, and learning and often impact all areas of daily living. Teaching communication requires educators to determine the individual needs of each student. Improving technology has also added a new dimension to developing communication, speech, and language. It is important to use curriculum and programs that are successful and research based whenever possible.

Below is a listing of some examples of curriculum and programs that can be used to teach communication skills to individuals on the autism spectrum. In addition to these programs, please be aware that there are many other supplemental programs, books, strategies, and resources that are not included but are available. Many of these resources can be accessed by Indiana residents via the Library at the Indiana Institute on Disability and Community. Inclusion on this list does not imply endorsement of any one program.
