Life Skillset
Did you know that community-based-instruction (CBI) is conducted in natural environments where students will use these skills now and throughout their lives with real equipment and materials?
Did you know that CBI is well planned, on-going and coordinated with other subject/life domain areas?
Did you know that CBI is NOT a field trip, a one-time event or staff doing the activity or work while the students watch?

Teaching life skills is an essential element of education for all students. Teaching students in community settings is relevant to the student's post-school goals and should not only be included in the Transition IEP but also be an integral part of the school's services. This document contains 6 adult domains, 23 subject domains and 147 major life demands. The major life demands represent the events or activities typically encountered by most adults in everyday life. The annual goals and lesson units that can be extracted from the chart are endless.
